1. Executive Summary

The implementation of the principles of good governance as promoted in the third King Report on Governance for South Africa, 2009, and enshrined in the Code of Governance Principles for South Africa (hereinafter referred to collectively as ‘King III’) have been accepted as a crucial element towards the success of Government, including local governments in meeting the needs of the people of South Africa.

One of the key principles of good governance is the establishment of ethical leadership within an institution. In a municipal setting this translates into:

- the need to clearly define the roles and responsibilities of the leadership and individual leaders in a municipality;
- the embedding within the leadership of an ethical culture based on the vision and values of the institution and Constitutional principles, both to guide and to measure against, the actions of leaders; and
- the entrenchment of the principle of holding leaders accountable for their actions.

Hence, the first step to achieving ethical leadership is for the leadership within a municipality, whether office bearers, managers, political committees or any other structure promoting leadership within the municipality, to clearly understand their roles and responsibilities, including the separation of duties as provisioned in legislation. A clear understanding of such roles and responsibilities will then allow for an ethical culture and the principle of accountability can take root within the institution.

Therefore, the Amathole District Municipality, through this document seeks to outline in summary the different roles of different structures within the municipality. The framework will outline the working areas and boundaries for all structures and office bearers and its basis will be the provisions made by legislation. The purpose of this framework is ensuring that political and administrative structures are aware of their roles and responsibilities to ensure synergy in the way Council structures operate; in the delivery of ADM's core objectives against a code of ethics.

2. Definition of Governance

The King III report defines good governance as following:

“Good corporate governance is essentially about effective, responsible leadership. Responsible leadership is characterised by the ethical values of responsibility, accountability, fairness and transparency.”
The Constitution of South Africa Chapter 7, s151.1.a) states that:

The objects of local government are:-

(a) to provide democratic and accountable government for local communities; (emphasis).

The Internal Audit Framework, released by National Treasury defines governance as;

> “Governance entails how an organisation is managed, which includes culture, policies and strategies and the way it deals with stakeholders.”

The ADM ascribes to the following tenants of good governance:

a) Accountability;

b) Transparency;

c) Participatory;

d) Responsive;

e) Selflessness;

f) Promotes efficient and effective service delivery;

g) Promotes Batho Pele principles;

h) Comply with current trends of good corporate governance;

3. Purpose and Objectives of the framework

This framework seeks to promote:

- decision making that is not only consistent with statutory and policy requirements, but also upholds Constitutional principles and the values of the ADM,

a) to outline the processes to be followed in decision making;

b) to document roles and responsibilities of political and administrative structures, the relationships within these structures, office bearers, managers and officials; and

SECTION THREE – DOCUMENT FLOW IN ADM

Outline the flow of documents within the municipality and accountability at each level

1. Introduction

In line with ensuring that there is proper document management system within the organisation and accountability in the decisions that are made, a documentation process has to be put in place. The documentation process in any organisation can happen in the following manner:

a) Typing or Writing - document creation
b) Movement documents - protocol from the author to the approval of the document
c) Reviewing and approval - need to be sent to various accountability levels before being official documents
d) Filling documents - for future reference
e) Storing documents - for records and safekeeping

The Amathole District Municipality currently has a file plan in place which outlines the recording of documentation within the institution. All documents that are produced within ADM have to make provision to a reference that will ensure that the proper filling and storage of the document. The challenges that are being experienced with the implementation of the file plan is mainly centred around the non understanding of the purpose of the file plan and the role it plays in recording and storing of documents.

2. Flow of Documentation and Accountability Agreements

All documents in the institution must entail accountability levels in order to ensure clearance and alignment of the document with the institutional vision and mission.

It must be noted that all Directors in the institution have delegations that have been assigned to them by the Municipal Manager as per the relevant functions that they have to perform in their department.

Within the context of this document the line functions delegations refers to the core functions of the department and the supporting functions delegations refers to all the functions that do no form the core mandate of the department.
The following recommendations are made on flow of documentations within the LM and its accountability agreement:

a) Document flow from Unit Managers to the Director for approval as per the delegations on the line functions:

3. Document flow of submission to the Council Agenda

Once the Council approves the Integrated Development Plan, Budget and the Service Delivery Budget Implementation Plan (SDBIP), it’s of importance for departments to report to Council on the implementation of the projects and programmes.

Council Support has been put in place in order to assist with the Secretariat Services of the structure however contents of such reports originate from the departments.

3.1. Documentation flow for submission to the Council Agenda

Currently the standard flow of documentation is as follows:

- Working Group (inputs and recommend on items)

- Executive Management (inputs and recommended on items that need Council Approval but some items may be approved at this level, as per delegation)

- Standing Commitees (inputs and recommends on the items that need Council Approval)

- Mayoral Commitee (inputs and recommends on the items that need Council Approval but some items may be approved at this level as per delegation)

- Extended Troika (to consider Council agenda to ensure all items brought to Council are competent; to ensure that there is common understanding amongst the Troika + Municipal Manager before the Council meeting)

- Council (inputs, recommends and approves items)
4. Concluding Remarks

An institution should ensure that it preserves and stores its information through a documentation management system. A common understanding in the role that record management plays in an institution is of crucial importance.

The documentation process may involve various forms of managing communication but accountability must be achieved at each level in order to be clear and precise about the delegations that each Director has and can be able to monitor.

The Director's of the department must know that they are ultimately accountable for the reporting and management of the resources against the core functions including the supporting functions of an institution.

Council is in place to ensure that the Municipality is in-line with the attainment of the mandate as bestowed on them by the electorate. Their functionality is mainly based on the reports of the departments and in that way they may be able to report back to the constituencies on the performance of the institution against the attainment of the targets that have been set.
SECTION FOUR – POLITICAL AND ADMINISTRATIVE INTERFACE

Introduction

This section is set to ensure that the general conflict that exists in South African municipalities is diffused by clearly outlining the different roles of politicians and officials. In simpler terms, councillors set policy and direction; officials implement the policy and manage delivery.

Legislations, in the form of the Municipal Systems Act and the Municipal Structures Act places responsibility for the administration clearly on the Municipal Manager. Legislative compliance is very important and it is important that all councillors and officials understand their roles and responsibilities as defined in these acts in particular.

Politicians, as well as defining policy direction, are the primary means for conveying community concerns over service delivery and are the deciders of resource allocations. They have values about what and how things are managed. For all these reasons they must be part of managing the municipality without attempting to do the managers' job.

Managers (administration) on the other hand have professional and local expertise about what is possible and appropriate. They hold values about what and how things should be changed. They must be part of leading the municipality without doing the politicians' job.

The overlap of responsibilities means there are three arenas of work for the Mayoral Committee and the top management team – two separate ones for each team and one joint arena for both teams.

The three areas are:

- Political – where politicians in mayoral committees or caucuses draw their authority from being appointed by the Council to positions and elections. Their legitimacy comes from the fact that they were elected by the people usually on the basis of a manifesto. Within the council, they have the authority to define the council’s strategic direction and priorities, decide budgets and negotiate the relationships between different political parties and partners.

- Managerial – where managers individually and in management teams draw their authority from their formal appointments within the council. Their authority stems from the legal, governmental and organisational implications of delivering services and good governance.
- Joint – where politicians and managers share responsibility for agreeing overall strategy and managing overall performance. They have to bring together all the essential parts of major decisions so that they meet the political, community, governmental and professional realities of the situation. To be effective, senior politicians and managers must be clear on which responsibilities are shared and which are separate. These responsibilities will vary with new arrivals (managerial and, particularly, political) who will need to learn the ropes. Municipal leadership must be clear, first with one another and then with others within the organisation and with political groupings, communities and partner agencies about who does what.

Framework for understanding roles

The roles of politicians and administration can be summarised against six key activities of namely:

- establishing the council’s strategic direction, priorities and resource levels;
- monitoring and managing the council’s performance;
- engaging in community and community leadership;
- directing partnership working at strategic and service delivery levels;
- organising and changing the council; and
- taking responsibility for individual, team and organisational capacity development.

The six points above can be summarised as follows:

Conclusion

The intention of this framework is not to replicate the provisions within legislation, but to provide a holistic approach to governance within ADM. Good corporate governance is viewed as very critical in the local government sector as the delivery of services to communities is dependent on the governance culture of an institution. The framework is not intended to ensure that office bearers and officials only meet the requirements set out in the law, but also ensures that governance is carried out in the context of ADM's vision, mission and values.
